The Examiner has stated that Claims 46 to 65 are drawn to a plurality of disclosed patentably distinct species of the method as defined by: (A) the species of support transfer device used, and (B) the species of solid support used as defined by composition and shape.

The applicant hereby provisionally elects the species wherein the method uses a support transfer device of a rack having a plurality of rods sized to be inserted through an aperture formed in each support and a mechanism to prevent the supports from coming off the rack, and a polypropylene sphere as the solid support, to which the claims shall be limited should no generic claims be finally held allowable.
